Robert Bickford will continue to do the cutting of gems at No. 5 Fair street as formerly. From the item published one might infer that he was not to continue in business.

Night watchman, Ernest W. Hutchins, is a candidate for collector of taxes for the coming year. Mr. Hutchins' duties as watchman do not prevent him from having the afternoon of each week available to collect the taxes as well as not. Therefore he is a candidate and his friends hope he may be elected.

Evangelical services will be held at the Universalist church, the evenings of March 16-18. Rev. C. A. Hayden, D. D., will preach. Dr. Hayden is well known throughout Maine from his long pastorate at Auburn and Augusta. He is a forceful and eloquent preacher. All people are invited to reserve these dates and come.

Frank Millett was badly bitten on the back of his hand by a horse, Saturday. Mr. Millett was driving a pair of horses across the bog at the head of the lake, when one of the animals sank into the mud. Mr. Millett used the other horse to rescue his mate. The horse evidently did not like the job and to emphasize this fact fastened his teeth into Mr. Millett's hand.

Next Tuesday the Universalist Ladies' circle will serve supper at Concert at 6:45. This will be followed by an entertainment in charge of the Philathea class. A part of the entertainment will be a farce entitled, "The Minister's First 'At Home' cast of characters."

The Well-known Author.

Funeral Services of Mrs. E. E. Young Held.

The last holy rites were held over the remains of Mrs. Nina F. wife of Ellisworth E. Young, on Sunday at 2 p. m., Rev. M. C. Ward, pastor of the First Universalist church, officiating.

The following selections were given by the Methodist mixed quartet, composed of: O. P. Brooks, bass, S. C. Foster, tenor, Clara M. Connor, soprano and Mrs. C. L. Decosta, "Looking this Way," "Come, 'Tis We'll Understand," and "We'll Never Say Good-bye in Heaven."

In eulogizing the deceased Mr. Ward spoke in particular of her affable, cheery and loving disposition. These characteristics are readily acknowledged by all with whom she came in contact. Seeing only the sunshine of life and lovingly ministering to those who were sick and in need, she had acquired the love and esteem of a host of friends, both in Massachusetts and her native state.

Mrs. Young was born in this town, May 6, 1864. While a small child her parents moved to Greenwood where the deceased received her early education.

The deceased was married to Ellisworth E. Young in Foxboro, Mass., Nov. 28, 1890, by Rev. D. M. Powers. Immediately after their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Young made their home in South Essex, Mass., later removing to Lynn, where they opened a hotel which proved a financial success.

Mrs. Young was a member and Past Poohontas of Winnetka Council, D. of P., of Lynn, also holding membership in several social organizations.

The floral offerings were profuse and beautiful, including the following:

Pillar of roses, inscribed "Wife"—Husband. Wreath of pink and roses—Mrs. George O. Foss and family.

Basket of roses and pink—Mr. and Mrs. Don Smith, Ralph B. and Frank Young.

Bouquet of pink—Mrs. Cummings. Wreath of pink and roses—Miss Woodbury.

Pink and fern—Mrs. Marie Seguin. Pink and fern—Mrs. W. W. Carter.

Pink and fern—Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Sheehan. Pink—F. H. Cummings.

Pink—G. W. Holmes and family. Bouquet of pink—Jim House employees.

Wreath of roses and pink—Miss Gault. Calla lilies—Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Pike.

Pink—Mrs. Annie Barrows and Lucie F. Barrows.

The remains were conveyed to the cemetery to be interred later.

Central Park Notes.

Saturday the new picture subjects were "The American Squadron in France," "A Fancy Dress Ball" and "Niccolo De Lapi." Mrs. Yeaton sang "Here's to Our Sweethearts and Wives" and "When You Were a Pinhead." Organ orchestra furnished music for the skating.

Washington's birthday was celebrated at the Park. In the evening, skating, orange and potato races were on the card. The skate voting contest was declared at the skating rink Saturday evening, Feb. 25, at the Norway Opera House by the Senior class of N. H. S. A play full of mirth and pathos, appealing to the old and young. Everything has been done to insure a grand success. The cast was published in the ADVERTISER of Feb. 11th. BETHEL.

Universalist Notes.

There were two large audiences at the Universalist church, Sunday. In the morning the pastor preached on Evangelism, the good news or glad tidings of the Gospel.

At 6:30 the Y. P. C. U. held a special service in the main audience room of the church in honor of Washington. There were many present who took part in the service giving selections from history or referring to noted instances in the life of Washington which are helpful and suggestive of those characteristics which made his life great. The music was patriotic.

At 8 p. m. there was a Union service in the same church under the direction of the W. C. T. U. This was a memorial service in honor of Frances E. Willard and her noble work. There were several speakers who gave sketches from Miss Willard's writings or sayings, glimpses of her life history from girlhood to her death, taken from her history, and the principal address was by Rev. J. H. Little.

The meeting was preceded by a praise service, the wife of Rev. Mr. Curtis of the Congregational church presiding. A union choir with a duet by Dr. and Mrs. Wight and a solo by Mrs. Banghart, wife of the pastor of the Methodist church, made the musical part of the program very interesting. Students of Gould Academy were present and took part in the service. Rev. Mr. Wentworth, pastor of the Norway Methodist church, being of exhortation with Mr. Banghart, was present, reading the Scriptures and offering the prayer. He also gave an address. The audience filled the church even to standing room.

MR. TOM TUMBLEDOWN.

Do you know Mr. Tom Tumbledown, A man of wide renown?

Oh, yes, he must live in your town At his place called Tumbledown.

Just tumble to our tale of Tom, Whose chimney's tumbling down. He's rickety, rickety, like his place, This careless, lazy clown.

If he keeps store, it's full of dust, And the scale is full of rust. While goods are scattered everywhere, And everything looks mussed.

Or his office is a fearful sight, With cigar stumps decorated, While the walls are all done up in brown Where experts have expected.

And Tom's farm looks the very same— Everything's going to rack, While every horse, cow and sow Is a rattling old bone rack.

Tom's chickens roost on the wagon wheel, His turks not on the fence, For turks and fence some time ago Turned into the fence.

And Tom loafs along and laughs at fate, His critics all forgiving. He swings on his rickety garden gate While his poor wife earns the living.

But don't let's be too hard on Tom As we list to this narration. For he we are Tom himself Or else some near relation.

KURIOS FROM KORRESPONDENTS Q. Some of my pigeons have a most peculiar disease. A cock bird's wing became stiff. I bred from him, and now two of his squabs have a stiff wing. What is this disease, its cause and cure?

A. The trouble is called "wing bone" and is claimed to come from inbreeding and improper feeding at time of molt. It is cancerous in nature, and victims should be killed.

Q. Is it true that a Leghorn hen mated to a Cochon male becomes a half Leghorn and half Cochon and from that time remains the same, it matters not with what other breeds mated?

A. No. That fool notion exploded fifty years ago. To mate an eleven pound cock with a hen half the size is, however, a colossal fat stunt.

Q. Is there any way to make hens set?

A. Yes. Pen them in a coop where there is little room to exercise; feed only whole corn to make them fat and lazy. The hotter the coop the better.

Q. Which do you consider the more important, shape or color?

A. Saying is "Shape makes the breed, color the variety." Thus if you don't have the shape you haven't the breed. Both shape and color in every section are scored, and the result decides the prize. A good shape with bad color and a good color with bad shape are seldom considered where there is competition.

Q. How can I prevent my pheasants from eating their eggs? How many eggs should a pheasant lay in a season?

Q. If you will watch, you will discover that the cock generally does the trick. In the spring, place a bundle of brush in each corner of your pheasantry, leave just room enough behind for hen, and a hole in the bundle just large enough for hen to creep through. Buy or make eggs (ground glass) same size, shape and color as pheasant's egg. Always have one in nest, and scatter a few around and let the birds dull their beaks on them. Always gather eggs closely. Twenty-five to thirty per hen.

FEATHERS AND EGGSHELLS. To incubate thoroughbred mice store unthrashed grain for litter. To get chickens with crop bound fill up the scratch floors with such material. To kill the chicks turn them loose on it.

Nearly all pigeon diseases originate in neglect. Lack of grit to grind their food is chief cause of their mortality. It's the red mites that worry and weaken and wreck the flock. Don't waste money on louse paint. Use coal oil on them, and plenty of it.

As an instance of how fabulous stories originate, a pigeon dropped exhausted on the deck of a ship off Brazil. Having the name "Antwerp" on its leg band, the captain jumped to the conclusion that it had flown from Antwerp, a distance of 3,500 miles. The name "Antwerp" was the breed to which the pigeon belonged.

The epidemic of mouth and foot disease cost the government $500,000 and the lives of 3,605 animals. There was a great cry at the beginning about it being a poultry disease. We live right where the most cases existed and so far have not heard of one hen that handed in her checks except for feasting the government officials.

We are reading of many postcard showers, but it remained for a North Yakima (Wash.) congregation to introduce the unique in the form of a "chicken shower." The pastor's flock of 100 being poisoned, it did not rain "dogs and cats," but chickens. As ministers in the west are scarce, they may simply be a ruse to attract a preacher shower.

A hen over nineteen years old recently died at Strinestown, Pa. There were many generations at the funeral. The past winter a watch was kept on Philadelphia butchers to see that all hogs were dead before scalding. This rule should be applied to poultry plants and private homes, where chickens are often scalded alive.

A solid train of turkeys, 10,000 in number, was distributed from Hagers-town, Md., during the holidays. Think of the labors and losses to raise that many!

It's a foolish sport that takes a sick bird to a show supposing that the judge will not find it.

The exposure of transportation and confinement and excitement of the show room are hard enough for vigorous birds to bear.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed, it causes a humming sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circular free.

Microbes in the Scalp The Latest Explanation is that Microbes Cause Baldness.

Prof. Unna of Hamburg, Germany, and Dr. Sabouraud of Paris, France, share the honor of having discovered the hair microbe.

Baldness is not caused through a few weeks' work of these hair microbes, but is the result of conditions brought about by their presence. Baldness may not occur until years after the microbes began work, but it is certain to come sooner or later.

The microbes cut off the blood supply. They feed on the fatty matter about the roots of the hair, through which the blood is absorbed. Finally the fatty matter is consumed, the food supply of the hair is gone and it starves and finally dies.

Resorcin is one of the most effective germ destroyers ever discovered. Beta Naphthol is a most powerful yet absolutely safe germicide and antiseptic, which prevents development of germ matter, and creates a clean, healthy condition.

Pilocarpine, although not a coloring matter or dye, is an ingredient well established for its power to restore natural color to human hair when loss of color has been caused by a disease.

Borax, because of its well defined softening and cleansing properties, is most useful in the treatment of scalp and hair diseases. Glycerine acts as a stimulant to the hair bulbs, and has a soothing, healing and nourishing influence. Alcohol is indispensable in medicine because of its antiseptic, stimulating and preservative qualities.

We want every one who has scalp or hair trouble to try Rexall "93" Hair Tonic, which contains all these ingredients. If it does not give you complete satisfaction in every particular, we will return every penny you paid us for it, for the mere asking and without question or formality.

Of course you understand that when we say that Rexall "93" Hair Tonic will grow hair we do not refer to cases where the roots are entirely dead, the pores of the scalp closed, and the hair has the shiny appearance of a billiard ball. In cases like this there is no hope. In all other cases of baldness Rexall "93" Hair Tonic will grow hair, or cost the user nothing. Two sizes, 50 cents and $1.00. Remember you can obtain Rexall Remedies in Norway only at our store. The Rexall Store, F. P. Stone, Main street.

FRESHENING UP GLOVES.

How the Chamol Skin Variety Can Be Washed and Cleaned.

To wash and clean chamol skin gloves draw a quart of very hot water in a basin and add to it a teaspoonful of salad or olive oil to each pair of gloves to be washed. After adding the oil add a cake of ivory or white castile soap and swirl the whole into stiff lather, so that the oil is thoroughly mixed with the soapy water. Then add a quart more of hot water and then cold until the mixture is warm, but not more than comfortably warm. Remove the soap and beat up again with a large spoon, having not less than four or five quarts of the mixture for five pairs of gloves.

Drop the gloves in one by one and after letting them lie three minutes squeeze them gently for several minutes, rubbing with great care the soiled spots against the fingers. If the finger tips are much soiled castile or ivory soap may be rubbed directly in and immediately squeezed out, for the oil in the water will keep the soap so applied from stiffening the skin.

After, say, five minutes' squeezing take the gloves out and prepare a new water. If the gloves have not been allowed to become too soiled a thorough rinsing is now all that is necessary, and it is much better that the gloves be washed frequently than allowed to get so soiled as to wear out quickly in the laundering process.

The second water, and indeed every water used, should be of the same temperature as the first. If much soiled the same bath as the first should be used and the same process followed, rinsing them afterward in two clear warm waters, squeezing in each. If not much soiled the two rinsings may follow the first soap and oil bath.

The gloves should never be twisted or wrung, but squeezed very gently and at the end folded in clean towels and spatted and rolled carefully, then shaken out and hung in the air to dry.

Some gloves shrink lengthwise and some the other way in drying, and this should be counteracted by the careful use of a glove stretcher when the gloves are half dry. The fingers that are growing shorter should be gently pushed out at the tips, and those that are growing into nail-like shapes should be as gently spread. Always it should be remembered that wet chamol is easily pulled in pieces, and the handling should be most gentle.

WEST BUCKFIELD.

Two Deaths.
Mrs. Mary Hooper Hall, widow of Andrew Hall, died at her home Tuesday morning, Feb. 23, aged 79 years, 11 months. Funeral services at her home, Thursday, at 11 a. m. Rev. A. W. Pottle of Buckfield conducted the service. Mrs. Hall leaves three daughters and two sons, besides a number of grandchildren and great grandchildren. One brother, who is very feeble, lives in Paris.

Sarah E. Morse died at her sister's, Mrs. Jennie Bennett's, at South Paris, Friday night, Feb. 11, 66 years, 9 months and 20 days of age. Miss Morse went to her sister's in November to spend the winter and was sick only a week. Her remains were brought to her home Saturday and burial services were held there on Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Rev. A. W. Pottle of Buckfield conducted the funeral service. Her brother, Dr. B. Morse of Liverhill, Mass., was able to visit her at South Paris before her death but sickness in his family prevented his attendance at the funeral. Her sister, Mrs. Jennie Bennett, and her two sons, Montrose and George, were at the funeral. Everyone, young and old, liked Sarah and she will be greatly missed.

Mrs. Leah Buswell is not as well.
Mrs. Emma Bonney has been at Dastine Turner's.

Mrs. Mattie Hardy of Campbell, Mass., and Harry Hall of Deering were here to attend the funeral of their mother, Mrs. Mary Hall.

A VALENTINE SEARCH.

Substitute For the Usual Heart Hunt That Is More Exciting.

A substitute for the usual heart hunt, but fresher and more exciting, is a valentine search. The valentines are hidden in nooks and crannies around the room. A few are paper, but others are very much more pretentious. There are heart-shaped boxes, filled with chocolates or with bottles of perfume in nests of artificial flowers, heart shaped pincushions and sachets, penwipers, blotting pads, calendars and a variety of attractive articles inscribed simply, "To My Valentine." Cordate photograph frames are represented in leather, silver and pyrographed wood.

When the search is about to begin a tiny hand bell is rung by some member of the household and away all hurry. Much of the fun lies in the fact that the first object discovered is the valentine of the person discovering it. When it is found the player must stop searching. A couple of comic valentines are put in glided envelopes and hidden with the rest to add to the fun. These boobies do not count, and those finding them are told to continue their quest until something more desirable is unearthed.

If any hostess should find it too expensive to provide gifts for all members of the company she might limit the number to three or four and let those first to discover them retain them, or valentines might be in store for all women of the party and the men detailed to help them search.

In the way of romps, which are relished now and then by the most sensible of people, have a pretty one called hearts to let. For this as many chairs as there are women players are decorated with huge bows of ribbon or tissue paper, bunches of artificial flowers and golden hearts. They are arranged back to back in the center of the room. Each man selects a chair and marks it as his own by writing his name on a card and placing it on the back of the chair. The girls blindfolded scrambled for the seats.

The name on the back of any chair into which a girl sinks is that of the man for which she is supposed to have a special predilection. When the laughter of this valentine alacrity has died down the girls name the chairs and the men are blindfolded, the inference as to the chair taken being the same. No prize is, of course, attached to this game.

Or the hostess may cut from pink cardboard or tissue paper a quantity of wee pink hearts, which are scattered or hidden around the room. While the hearts are being distributed banish the valentines into the hall or an adjoining room. When they are readmitted have them ranged in line and get some one to play a lively piano tune. When the music stops the players scramble for the hearts. When it begins again they must fall into line once more. This continues until all the hearts are gathered up.

A Dainty Gown.
This is the ideal of the year that a woman's thoughts turn to the making or purchasing of dainty lingerie. The white sales in the shops are "on," and everything is marked down to ridiculous prices.

NIGHTGOWN OF SAINBOCK AND TAIL LACE.
Lously low prices, but the woman who cannot buy the best or second best in the underwear line should make her own garments. And right here is a saving all along the line in remnants of longcloth, laces and embroideries. The nightdress illustrated is one of the newest designs and is charmingly trimmed with imitation valenciennes edging and insertion.

Care of Tablecloths.
When not in use a tablecloth should be kept in folded creases and when brought out to be spread should be laid on the table and unfolded its entire length, the width being doubled, with the center crease along the center of the table. Then the half breadth that is folded should be turned back and the cloth will hang even. Careless servants often gather up a cloth "anyhow" without taking the trouble to fold it up again in its own creases, and thus fresh ones are made. A tablecloth will keep fresh looking as long again if it is always folded up in its own folds and put away until the next meal.

The French have a way of making even an inferior quality of table linen look well without the aid of starch. When the napkins are washed and ready to be ironed they are dipped into boiling water and partially wrung out between cloths. They are then rapidly ironed with as hot a flatiron as possible without burning them.

THE EARTH'S ENVELOPE.

Three Distinct Strata of Air Surround the World.

The new science of the air is the result of many hundred kite and sounding balloon flights made by day and by night in fair weather and foul over land and sea at all seasons of the year and from the equator to the arctic circle. Most people know that the warm air surrounding the earth is only a thin belt, but we do not most of us know that at ten miles above the earth it would not only be bitterly cold, but the sun would appear quite different.

The air is stratified in three more or less distinct layers. In the lowest we live. It extends about two miles and is a region of turmoil, whimsical winds, cyclones and anti-cyclones. At two miles the freezing point is reached, and then there is a second stratum extending upward for about another six miles. Here the air grows steadily colder and drier, the lowest temperature recorded being 167 degrees below freezing point. Here the air moves in great planetary swirls produced by the spinning of the earth on its axis so that the wind always blows in the same easterly direction.

The greater the height the more furious is the blast of this relentless gale. After this layer comes the third, or isothermal stratum, discovered almost simultaneously by M. de Bort and Dr. Assman. This is called the permanent inversion stratum, because the temperature increases with the height reached. But the temperature so far recorded in the second stratum are not high, being far below zero F., generally somewhere from 122 degrees to 140 degrees below it.

Here the air no longer swirls in a planetary circle. The wind may blow in a direction contrary to that in the second layer. And the air invariably is excessively dry. Where this third stratum ends no one knows. But it must be more than eighteen miles above the earth, for sounding balloons have reached this height and have not found the end of the permanent inversion layer of air. When the influence of the upper regions of air upon the lower is fully understood it may be possible to foretell the weather not merely for a day, but for a week.—Chicago Tribune.

HATCHET SHINGLE GAUGE.

Device For Laying Shingles Without Use of Straightedge.

There are many places on a roof where it is not practical to lay shingles to a chalk line or straightedge, which makes it necessary to use some kind of gauge. Instead of having a special gauge for this work, one can be attached to the shingling hatchet, as shown in the accompanying cut.

The gauge consists of a piece of wire bent as in Fig. 1 and attached to the hatchet by driving the sharp end into the end of the wood handle, Fig. 2. A staple is also driven over the wire to keep it from turning. The method of using the gauge is shown in Fig. 3. The length of the wire will depend upon the number of inches the shingle is to be exposed to the weather.—Popular Mechanics.

HOUSE PLANTS IN WINTER.

How to Make Them Thrive by Observing Simple Rules.

The best exposure for house plants in the winter is, as a general thing, a southern one. The next best is an eastern one. Some plants can be grown in western windows, but they never do as well as in the other exposures, chiefly because of the intense heat of the afternoon sun. If care is taken, however, to shade the glass during the hottest part of the day it is possible to grow plants well under these conditions.

A few plants do well in a north window. The lack of sunshine prevents the production of flowers. But many foliage plants thrive. They require much less water because evaporation, due to absence of sunshine, takes place in such a location more slowly. Give only the amount of water needed to keep the soil moist. More will cause a souring of the soil, a condition seldom met with when plants are fully exposed to sunshine. In a northern location the soil around the roots should be turned over at least once a week to allow the sun to reach it and, as it were, purify it. Some plants, like the geraniums and carnations, can hardly get too much sunshine.

Another thing plants require is ventilation. A florist always has his house. Of course it is hard to get things down to such fine points in a private house, but we can, by raising and lowering windows, frequently change the atmosphere to all life.

Another matter of importance in plant growing is watering. Showering is almost as necessary as root watering. The leaves of the plant are covered with pores, and the plant breathes through them. If these pores become clogged with dust and dirt the plant surely suffers. Showering, therefore, removes the dirt from the pores and, generally speaking, insures a healthy plant. Where a plant fails to get this moisture the leaves turn yellow and fall off, and the plant takes on a sickly appearance.

In the house during the winter it is a great benefit to plants to keep water evaporating on stoves, register or radiators in rooms where artificial heat is used. While sweeping or dusting the room indoors or the piazza outdoors it is well to cover plants with a light thin cloth. Another thing to remember is to remove all dying leaves as soon as they turn yellow; also cut off all flowers as soon as they commence to fade and never throw them down among the plants to decay. If a plant shows a tendency to grow tall and branchless cut it back at least once a third.

TOOLED LEATHER WORK.

How to Make Useful and Inexpensive Articles From Calfskin.

Inexpensive and useful articles may be made from calfskin and tooled. A skin containing six square feet costs 20 cents, a square foot. Music bags, table mats, cardcases, bill books, needlebooks, purses and glove cases can be made from it.

First make an exact copy on paper of the article you wish to make. Place leather on piece of marble or soapstone with pattern on top and trace all lines with a hard pencil. Then wet leather quite wet on wrong side with a sponge or soft cloth. Go over all lines on right side with a nut pick, pressing hard. Then with a nail set costing 10 cents and hammer bring down the design by tooled—merely placing nail set on leather and pounding with hammer. If initials are used tool all around, leaving letters plain. If leaves or flowers are used tool all around, leaving design plain, or vice versa. The veins in leaves may be put in with nut pick.

The articles may be stitched on sewing machine with buttonhole twist to match leather and leave edges raw.

How to Wash a Plume.

The advice given by one woman for washing a plume is as follows: Lay the plume in a suds made of good white soap and cold water and let it stand for two or three hours. Then put into hot water, where it should remain about twenty minutes. Then, with a piece of soft cloth or silk, dipped in soapuds, remove any dirt which may remain. Lay it on a clean towel and touch with a piece of cloth rolled up to restore the curl. When almost dry, shake until fluffy, place in tissue paper and put it in the warming oven of the stove to dry thoroughly. If necessary use the dull side of an ivory paper cutter in restoring the curl.

How to Make Nice Clothes Hangers.

Nice homemade clothes hangers can be made from ordinary wooden hoops cut any desired length. Cover them with a padding of cotton batting that has been sprinkled liberally with violet, orris root or any other sachet powder. The hanger should then be bound with narrow Dresden ribbon or slipped into a shirred ribbon case made to fit. They are excellent for gifts.

Limit of Mining Operations.

The boring conducted by the Prussian department of mines at Czuchow, in Silesia, had to be discontinued recently upon reaching a depth of 2,240 meters in view of the fact that the cost of drilling at this depth in hard sandstone was out of proportion to the obtainable results. Like the boring at Panschwitz, in Silesia, which had to be abandoned at a depth of 2,003 meters on account of the drills breaking, the Czuchow boring was undertaken for scientific purposes only since mining operations are of course entirely impossible at this depth, even if no account is taken of the rapidity with which the expense for hoisting increases with depth.—Scientific American.

The Silver Flagon

A Wonderful Treasure It Held For Many Years.

By CLARISSA MACKIE.

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

Great-aunt Hannah squinted horribly, so when with almost her last breath she looked earnestly at her three grandchildren and gasped, "The silver flagon is for you—it has never been opened—you know the legend," not one of us really knew to whom the heirloom rightfully belonged.

In the library the two executors conferred amiably together. In the kitchen the servants discussed the legacies they had received.

In the long parlor Amelia, Fanny and I sat in front of the glowing grate fire. On the white-marble mantelpiece above our heads stood a pair of precious Dresden vases, a Wedgwood clock and a Chinese fan. In the center, directly under the painting of Mrs. Dorothy Fabyan, was the silver flagon, flawless in shape and perfect in its chased design of vine and leaf and clustered fruit. Its polished surface gave back a distorted reflection of our three faces, ruddy in the firelight.

No mention had yet been made of Aunt Hannah's bequeathed disposition of the family heirloom. It was not mentioned in the will, and its ownership must be settled among the three of us.

It was Amelia who broke the long, awkward silence by reaching up a graceful arm and taking the silver flagon from its resting place.

"I am the eldest," she apologized, settling back in her chair, "and I am quite sure that Aunt Hannah meant me to have it. She looked at me," Amelia's tone was coolly defiant.

"She looked at me, too," said Fanny in gentle protest. "I am sure she looked at me, did she not, Esther?"

I shrugged my shoulders helplessly. "I thought she looked at me," I murmured feebly.

"No one could gaze in three different directions at one time," said Amelia impatiently.

"Aunt Hannah could," I announced loyally.

"For shame, Esther Fabyan!" they cried in duet, and then they turned their backs upon me and fell into whispered converse over the probable contents of the bone of contention—of course I mean the silver flagon.

The tall silver stopper fitted snugly to the neck, and around it was a thin stream of red sealing wax.

The silver flagon had once been the property of Mistress Dorothy Fabyan, our sweet ancestress, and tradition laid it that within its polished interior the fair Dorothy had secreted the precious jewels which her rich husband had lavished upon her. When she was dying she had given the flagon to her young daughter, saying:

"Guard well the flagon, daughter, and when you have reached years of discretion you may break the seal and learn the contents—rubies and diamonds and pearls. Let no other woman steal it away from you! It contains what all women desire and but few attain. It will be yours."

"And it belonged to you, mother, dear!" the young girl had timidly asked as she stroked the delicate, withered cheek.

Dorothy Fabyan had smiled proudly, ere she closed her beautiful eyes forever. "Aye, it was mine for a season," she said.

The young daughter had died in her teens, and the silver flagon, with its seal still unbroken, passed to a distant branch of the family, gay townspeople, who took small notice of Cousin Dorothy's bequest save to thrust it away on the top shelf of a cupboard and forget its existence.

And thus it had come down to us, the last of a long line. At times its history had been forgotten, and for ornament on sideboard or mantelpiece. Again some newer owner would look longingly at the seal, yet hesitate to break in upon the secret it had concealed.

Aunt Hannah had owned it last, and she was so choice of it that never did a vulgar finger touch its surface or careless dust cloth even approach its throne on the white marble. No hand save Aunt Hannah's own came in contact with the silver flagon.

And now Amelia and Fanny turned it this way and that and gently tapped the stopper, guessing idly at the contents.

Amelia looked longingly at the red seal. "I believe it contains the old Fabyan jewels—it was never known what became of them after the war. I have heard that Dorothy Fabyan stripped the gems from their settings and concealed them somewhere. It is likely she hid them in this flagon. How strange that no one has cared enough about them to investigate its contents!"

"Suppose we leave the seal unbroken," I suggested.

"Why should we do that?" asked Fanny, with wide open eyes.

"It never has been opened," I said lamely. "So many of the Fabyan women have owned the flagon and respected the seal of its contents, why should we open it?"

"Me, too," added Fanny. "I suppose that is the best way," I agreed. "We are the last of the race, and none of us is married. Let us at least satisfy our curiosity."

"Besides that, we must divide the contents or decide upon the ownership of the flagon, since you will not recognize that I have an individual claim," Amelia drew a silver penknife from her pocket and opened a shining blade.

"Or that I have a claim," put in Fanny decidedly.

"Or mine," I added.

"We must compromise," Amelia's voice was growing colder, and involuntarily I drew nearer the grate and poked the fire into greater warmth.

"Let us divide the contents into two parts and call the flagon itself a third part, each of us to agree to be entirely satisfied with her share. Do you agree?"

"I do," said Fanny promptly.

"Slight useless," I queried.

Amelia nodded emphatically.

"Very well, I agree."

"I am the eldest. I shall take first choice," began Amelia, with a slight flush on her lovely face. "I choose half of the contents of the flagon."

"I am next," cried Fanny eagerly. "I will take the other half of the contents. And you, Esther, what will you choose?" she asked magnanimously.

"I—I will take the silver flagon," I responded humbly, and they seemed very well satisfied.

We gathered about Amelia's chair as she chipped at the sealing wax with her penknife. She flung the crimson bits into the fire, and it made little white hot sheets of flame that darted up the black mottled chimney like a short life that is quickly burned out.

Once more we bent above the silver flagon with the quick thrust of a woman's fragile beauty that flares for a brief period and then dies away, leaving gray ashes.

When the wax was broken and the stopper had been with difficulty loosened from the slender neck of the vessel in turn we peered down the slender orifice and saw nothing. We shook the flagon and heard nothing. We turned it upside down, and nothing happened.

"It is empty," said Amelia, with a white face.

"Perhaps the jewels are stuck fast to the bottom," I suggested. "You know they have been interred for a century."

"Get your curling tongs, Fanny," commanded Amelia, darting a hostile glance in my direction.

I looked into the glowing coals, wondering at the magic of possession that had seized upon us three cousins who had been loving friends from childhood. Here we were wrangling over the possession of a silver flagon to which we had scarcely ever given a thought in our busy lives. Thanks to Great-aunt Hannah, we were rich beyond our wildest dreams, and still we could not be satisfied without prying into Dorothy Fabyan's silver flagon!

Fanny returned with the long silver tongs that were used to wave her straight black hair. "They should reach to the very bottom of the jug!" she cried excitedly.

Once more we bent above the silver flagon while Amelia thrust the tongs carefully down the slender neck and after a painful interval drew forth a folded slip of yellowed paper covered with fine pointed chirography.

Fanny and Amelia leaned back pale and breathless while I spelled out the spidery words that explained how Dorothy Fabyan, that clever housewife of so many decades ago, had discovered a most wonderful complexion wash—"Cleopatra's Balm of Beauty," she called it. To this marvelous face wash she ascribed her own exquisite beauty. The ingredients were almost impossible to obtain in those primitive days, and she had even sold her precious jewels to obtain the necessary elements of the balm. Now, she passed the secret of its making to her own daughter and afterward down to the coming generations of the women of her family, and, as if the mere possession of the recipe sealed within the silver flagon could impart a magic spell upon its owner, the Fabyan women had been famous for their wonderful beauty—all save poor Great-aunt Hannah and myself.

"What greater jewels doth any woman possess," concluded the old letter, "than diamond eyes, teeth of pearls, coral cheeks and ruby lips? These jewels you will find sealed within my silver flagon."

I ran my eyes over the carefully compiled directions for "Cleopatra's Balm of Beauty," and ere I reached its close Amelia uttered a little angry cry and snatched the bit of paper from my grasp. In an instant it fluttered into the fire, and my exclamation of distress brought both girls to my side.

"You could not care for that silly recipe, Esther," wondered Fanny. "See, you have the beautiful silver flagon, while we have nothing. Yet we hoped for gems."

"Jewels you both have a plenty," I said mournfully. "Look there!" I turned them about till they faced the tall pier glass set between the long windows, and there they stood regarding their beautiful faces in charming embarrassment while I bent above the silver flagon and stared defiantly at the reflection of my own plain features in its polished surface.

"Great-aunt Hannah never knew either," I marveled, thinking of her homely face and the contrasted beauty of her unselfish life.

"Poor old Esther," comforted the girls, poised on either arm of my chair, and as their kisses fell warmly on my uplifted face I seemed not to care that I had lost a heritage of beauty. My heritage of love was still my own.

Pumpkins That Talk.

Even the farmer, once the type of simplicity and now progressiveness, is learning how to advertise through his knowledge of the weaknesses of nature. One of these weaknesses is found in the lumpy pumpkin. Bruise a growing pumpkin and the scar will never be cleared away, but will show in the ripe pumpkin in the shape of delicate little yellow warts. Starting with this principle alone, shrewd farmers have made their pumpkin farms valuable. After the vegetables get good sized and prove that they will be fine ones they go into the patch and with a sharp stick scar them so that when they are ready for market their happy faces bear in words of warts legends like these. "Eat me at Smith's," "Smith will make pies of me soon," "Brown's pies are best," "Jones' pies are delicious," "You can eat me inside."

The wily farmer hauls these warty fellows to market and, calling Smith, Jones and Brown from their respective restaurants, shows the strange freak of nature. Of course a sale is made on sight, and the pumpkin lies at the front of the restaurant for a few days to astonish passersby until it must be made into pies to save it. Then the farmer discovers another freak pumpkin, suitably marked, to replace it. Fancy prices are to be had for these pumpkins, and stony patches that would never pay taxes in any other crop produce wealth in pumpkins.

New Plants. But few farmers have any idea of the great work our government is doing in the way of introducing new plants and fruits from the old world into the United States. During the last fiscal year more than 2,000 seeds and plants were brought in. The department of agriculture has explorers constantly on the outlook for all kinds of plants and fruits that seem capable of good yields in our own country. They are picked up especially in Manchuria, Korea and China. There are specimens from wild apricot trees ten feet in diameter. There are wild grapes and wonderful persimmons and bush cherries and other curious and valuable specimens that most of us never even dreamed of.

Forges on the Farm. The main advantage of having a small forge on a farm is not so much the saving of money as the saving of time. A little job of repairing can be done in the time that it would take to get to town and back, and the cost of the work is saved besides. A good portable forge can be bought for $6.

A Tribute

To Rev. B. S. Rideout by the Pastor of Grace Congregational Church of South Framingham, Mass.

THE EDITOR OF THE NORWAY ADVERTISER:—It was only today that I had placed in my hands the copy of the ADVERTISER containing announcement of the death of Rev. B. S. Rideout, the honored and beloved minister of your church. He was a greatly esteemed friend of mine and I was shocked to learn of his departure from this life. It was when I was the pastor of the Second Parish Church in Portland that I received an invitation to the Ecclesiastical Council called to ordain to the ministry a man then unknown to me, Bates S. Rideout. I was asked to be the preacher on that occasion.

I recollect clearly some of the impressions of that day, the unimpaired weather, the delightful gathering, the examination of the candidate in his personal experiences and doctrinal views. The genuineness of his views pleased us. His sober reach for the truth bespoke a faithful and fearless interpreter. At one point of opinion the Council took exception with him, and rather than "threaten it out" in public, he was called into private session of the Council. He showed the kind of man he was in acknowledging his lack of familiarity with usage, and promising to review the whole question in sympathy with Congregational methods. This he did in a clear cut way, after conversation and correspondence with the writer of this.

In looking over my reports I find that he was ordained Nov. 15, 1887, and that the text of the sermon was from Rom. xv, 13, "We then that are strong ought to bear the infirmities of the weak, and not to please ourselves. Let every one of us please his neighbor for his good, to edification. For even Christ pleased not himself." Is it not true that our friend was a sterling example of the fundamental teaching of this Scripture?

I lament with his church and the good people of Norway the death of this man of God. Permit me to thank you for the fine tribute which you gave to him in your paper of the 11th inst. How true it was, "When he talked to his people he told them something for their good."

In these twenty-two years he was a good minister and is now gone.

"Gone by the nigh way,
Do not say I am dead."

Very truly yours, C. H. DANIELS.

Tommy—Not much. The depositors have fallen off awfully since Violet got engaged.—Judge.

Who is this sassy guy
Carrying an assagai?

Just the same old gassy guy
That used to hunt the brassie lie.

Then he carried his big stick
Now of a sudden he takes his pick.
Then the liars used to kick.
Now the liars perish quick.

When he throws his assagai
All the beesets quickly die.
For he is the sassy guy
With the same old glassy eye.

That could always spot a lie
Or catch the liar on the fly.
Oh, the brassie, gassy guy
With his classie assagai!

How to Carry Books.

Almost all school children carry their books with a strap put around and buckled very tight. This will make dents in the cover where the board overlaps the body of the book. If the strap is left loose the books are liable to slip out. Place the cover of one book between the cover and flyleaf of its neighbor and the difficulty will be remedied. This will place the books in this manner do not require the strap buckled tight, or they can be carried without any strap just as well. Popular Mechanics.

AFTER FOUR YEARS OF MISERY

Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Baltimore, Md.—"For four years my life was a misery to me. I suffered from irregularities, terrible dragging sensations, extreme nervousness, and that all gone feeling in my stomach. I had given up hope of ever being well when I began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Then I felt as though a new life had been given me, and I am recommending it to all my friends."—Mrs. W. S. Ford, 2307 W. Franklin St., Baltimore, Md.

The most successful remedy in this country for the cure of all forms of female complaints is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It has stood the test of years and to-day is more widely and successfully used than any other female remedy. It has cured thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, and nervous prostration, after all other means had failed.

If you are suffering from any of these ailments, don't give up hope until you have given Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial.

If you would like special advice write to Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., for it. She has guided thousands to health, free of charge.

A Winner.

"Don't you think it is a terrible thing for a young girl like that to spend all of her time playing bridge?"

"Well, I don't know. She almost always wins."

Not For Her.

"No, indeed. I wouldn't go to the theater."

"A german frien' done tol' me dat play was one er de kin' ud make yeh hair curl, an' I ha trouble sufficient day now."

Not Guilty.

"Confound you, sir! What do you mean by jamming your umbrella in my eye?"

"Don't get excited, my friend. This ain't my umbrella. I borrowed it."

Too Late.

The Lady—Susan, please be careful of that new dinner set. I value it very highly.

Susan—Indeed O! will, ma'am, only O! wish you'd told me two days ago.

OCEAN EXPLORATION.

Norwegian Expedition to Study Atlantic Sea Floor.

Sir John Murray, Dr. Johan Hjort, Professor Gran, Dr. Holland-Hansen and Mr. Koefoed are among the members of a Norwegian expedition that will devote four months to the exploration of the deepest part of the Atlantic sea floor. The purpose of the forthcoming cruise of the Michael Sars is to try in the great ocean the new methods and instruments which have been developed within the past few years, especially during the international fishery explorations. It is believed that the great fishery nets and trawls which are now used for economic purposes in shallower waters can be used with success in great depths, down even to three and a half miles. On one occasion the Challenger, from a depth of nearly two miles with a ten foot trawl, brought up twenty-seven fish, belonging to seven species, but recently the Michael Sars, by means of a trawl with fifty-two foot headrope, brought up from a depth of over half a mile 225 fish, 10 of which belonged to new species. If these larger catching appliances can be used with success in the great depths of the Atlantic some important and interesting zoological results may be obtained.

Special interest will be attached to observations with Ekman's new current meter. This has been used with success by the Michael Sars down to depths of 200 fathoms. An attempt will be made by means of this current meter to measure the rate of currents over oceanic shoals.

FLATIRON A STERILIZER.

Common Household Implement Kills Disease Germs.

That the ordinary process of ironing clothes kills disease germs is the discovery made by a French scientist. A writer in the Paris Cosmos says:

The smoothing of household linen with a hot flatiron may accomplish much more than is intended by laundresses. As the iron is heated to temperatures that often exceed 130 degrees C. it has been thought that it must be able to sterilize certain fabrics and thus render hygienic service, especially in the country, where furnaces for disinfection or autoclaves for sterilization are not available.

It is well known that all microbes may be killed by the sufficiently prolonged application of a temperature of 70 degrees C., but sterilization requires 130 degrees, because the spores of certain bacteria resist lower temperatures.

Experiments have been made to show that the flatiron is capable at least of disinfecting linen. Pieces of cloth were selected that had been in contact with children suffering from contagious disease or had been contaminated with the germs of diphtheria, pyaemia, etc.

This linen was moistened and then ironed, after which it was rubbed on plates of gelatin prepared for the culture of microbes. It was found that no microbian colony developed.

A Radium Clock.

There have been many attempts to solve the secret of perpetual motion. The nearest approach to that ideal, though its inventor makes no claim to have discovered it, is a timepiece devised by Hon. R. J. Strutt, Lord Rayleigh's son, which consists of two leaves of aluminium, an exhausted glass tube and a fraction of a grain of radium. The radio activity of the radium causes the aluminium leaves to move once a minute, and with a wireless coherer a bell rings at each movement. For 10,000 years at least the wonderful energy inherent in the microscopic piece of radium will, it is calculated, continue to act, and nothing whatever needs to be done to the clock once it is set going.

Purification of Air.

A suggestion for the purification of air in the subway is contained in a recent issue of the Electrical Chemical and Metallurgical Industry. The system of Dr. R. von Foregger, who a few years ago proposed the use of fused sodium peroxide. Water added to this chemical would cause the production of sodium hydroxide and would liberate oxygen. The sodium hydroxide would then absorb the carbon dioxide of the air, and thus in addition to furnishing a fresh supply of oxygen it would purify the air as well.

Stomach Misery

for Over Six Years.

Think of it! After six years of sour stomach, of gas eruptions, of nervousness, during which time every meal lay on his stomach like a lump of lead, a man was restored to perfect health by Mi-o-na stomach tablets.

Read what Mr. Hoffman, landlord of the Webster Hotel, writes:

"I suffered misery and intense pains from stomach trouble for over six years, and all the doctoring that I did or medicines I used were of no avail until, about two years ago, when I used a treatment of Mi-o-na. The first few days' treatment helped me greatly, and upon using it a while I was made entirely free from any stomach trouble or complaint whatever. Since the cure by Mi-o-na I have regained my weight, I eat and sleep well, I am never nervous, and my entire general health is much better."—Max M. Hoffman, Webster, N. Y., Aug. 2, 1909.

Mi-o-na relieves stomach distress in five minutes. It acts like magic. It is guaranteed to cure sour stomach, gas eruptions, heartburn, dizziness, biliousness and nervousness, or money back for sale by druggists everywhere and by Frank Kimball, proprietor of the Noyes Drug Store, for 50 cents a large box. 688

WEST FRYEBURG.

The Stirling Club.

The meeting of the Stirling Literary Club at the home of Mrs. Charles Andrews, Feb. 2, was an all around pleasant gathering. The weather was mild and pleasant, so much so as to make one think ominously of the imminent other half of winter. But warmth and cheer prevailed the rooms of the hostess and enthused the members to their best efforts in the interest of the club.

After the call to order by the president, Mrs. E. E. Walker, the minutes of the last meeting were read by the secretary, Mrs. Edith Hardy, and routine business dispatched.

The lesson in French history was read by Mrs. M. A. Hill. Mrs. Andrews read from a late magazine an entertaining sketch of the childhood of Louis XIV. Mrs. M. Wentworth gave in her reading a pleasing view of the everyday life of the people of France, in particular the domestic economy as to cooking.

Mrs. Kate Meserve contributed a description of the country, its mountains, rivers, its productions, manufactures, population, etc., which was much enjoyed. Mrs. Hardy from her note book gave interesting extracts appropos to the occasion.

Mrs. Walker gave some suggestions for future study after which at a hint from the hostess adjournment was made to Feb. 16, at the home of Mrs. Wentworth.

Then a contribution, a little out of the order of the day came as a pleasing surprise in the serving by Mrs. Andrews of delicious cream much appreciated.

Charles Andrews has had tonsillitis, requiring a physician.

Mr. McFurtree's snow roller is expected to appear on our streets.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Towle are guests for a few weeks of Charles Andrews and wife, the last daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Towle.

NOTICE OF FORECLOSURE.

Whereas Wellington Bird, of Albany, in the County of Oxford, by his mortgage deed dated the 11th day of September, A. D. 1904, and recorded in the Oxford Registry of Deeds, Book 283, Page 200, conveyed to me, the undersigned, a certain parcel of real estate situated in said Albany, in said County of Oxford, and bounded as follows: Starting at the northeast corner of the land owned or occupied by W. W. Bird, thence running north ten and one-half degrees east to the old county road, now discontinued, thence west two and one-half degrees south fifteen rods to a stone set in the ground; thence west seventeen and one-half degrees south sixteen rods; thence west nine degrees south twenty-three rods to a stake set on lot line between houses five and six; thence south fifteen and one-half degrees east eighty-three rods to the land owned or occupied by W. W. Bird; thence north seven degrees and one-half degrees east seventy-eight rods to the first named point; the points of compass were made April, 1902. The mortgage deed and said land is a part of lot six in range five, and a part of the same land conveyed to A. G. Bean, by C. A. Grover, as recorded in Book 270, Page 45, of said Registry. And whereas the condition of said mortgage has been broken, now, therefore, by reason of the breach of the condition thereof, I claim a foreclosure of said mortgage.

DR. RUDOLPH MERTIN, Inc.

Don't Hibernates.

The farmer who can keep some sort of profitable work moving along during the winter months is more apt to increase his bank balance than the one who roasts his shins by the fire all winter.

In some localities the farmer can realize a nest-egg by hunting and trapping fur-bearing animals during spare time in the winter, and at the same time rid the neighborhood of those pests which prey on the chicken-coop.

There is seldom a farm the country through that hasn't a brushy nook or corner which might be cleared off during the winter and transformed into a profitable field or pasture. The brushy fence-row is another quite common waste space where winter work could be applied very advantageously.

The operation of a sawmill in any fair sized wood-lot during the winter will turn the timber into almost clear profits in the shape of lumber and fuel which, when not consumed or used about the farm, find a ready and profitable market. In addition to this, the ground thus cleared may be broken the following spring for pasture or crop.

Then there are numerous odd winter jobs which the farmer will find will total up good profits. All the machinery may be inspected, every missing bolt supplied and the bearings oiled. This will save precious time in the spring. Keeping up the tools will also prove a time and labor saver. One can even install a small set of blacksmith tools and clear up all repairs on the machinery that would have to be taken to town in the spring, to be put in running shape.

Last, but a long way from least, is the too generally omitted work of seed-testing.

These things, together with other work that circumstances may place in the farmer's way, ought to make the profits of the winter months' measure right up with those of any other season of the year.

Children

who don't seem to thrive very well

this Winter—who are weak, puny and pale? If you do—please take this friendly advice—Start giving them VINOL at once.

VINOL is a cod liver preparation, but it contains no oil or grease, and children love to take it because it tastes so good. It contains tonic iron, too.

You know and we know there is nothing so good to build up little bodies as this old-fashioned remedy, properly made and palatable.

Please try VINOL once—and if you don't find that it is the best health and body builder for children you ever knew, we will return your money on demand.

Why I Love

St. Valentine's

Day

Because It Helped Me In My Courtship and to Get the Girl I Wanted.

By ARTHUR GRAY.

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

A hundred years ago, when there were but a few million people in the United States, our progenitors fell in love in the old fashioned natural way and, being once in love, married as a matter of course, very few of them considering what they would live on in the married state. One reason for this, or cause, whichever one chooses to consider it, was that they fell in love and married young.

The reason why I appreciate St. Valentine's day is that it had a great deal to do with my present domestic happiness. A valentine began it, a valentine furnished means of keeping it up, and a valentine settled it.

Effie Winston at seventeen was at the exact age her mother married—married for love—married without any provision for the future. But Mrs. Winston married much later than a hundred years ago, when getting a living was easier and not so much was required. Consequently she didn't find married life as charming as it might have been had Effie's father had a fortune or at least an income commensurate with the requirements of an increasing family. Therefore, as might be expected, the lady did not propose that her son should take wives until they could support them or that her daughters should marry men who were not prosperous.

This was sensible, but when a sensible idea is carried too far it ceases to be sensible. To come to the point, Mrs. Winston determined that her daughter Effie, in whom I came to be interested, should marry none other than a rich man. I wanted Effie, and I hadn't a cent. Ergo, Mrs. Winston was a very stupid and a very obstinate woman. This was my boyhood reasoning, and since I have grown to middle age I have not, in my case, seen any reason to change it. I confess, however, that my daughter Effie shall not marry a pauper.

I made Effie's acquaintance at dancing school. I asked her to dance with me twice in one of our afternoon dancing school meetings. St. Valentine's day came along soon afterward, and she sent me a valentine. This was the beginning of it. Indeed, the pretty little missive was my first intimation that a member of the opposite sex saw in me something more than in the other boys of her acquaintance. I didn't stop to consider that she might have sent one to a dozen other boys. If I had the heavenly flower in my hand, I knew Effie had sent me the valentine, for, fearing I might be mistaken with regard to it, she scrawled her name on it. I assumed that the verses printed on it had been laid down there by the printer for the express purpose of letting me know that Effie loved me.

Many a verse, many a letter, has been penned by a woman who intends to tell of the love she bears a man that have not in them a tithe of the pure sentiment that came to me in those lines, which had been slung off in thousands by a pressman in a dirty apron. I dreamed over my valentine, and I dreamed of Effie. She is now very necessary to me, but she is incapable of inspiring me with any of that delicious feeling which welled up within me like waters fished to be quaffed by angels. I carried it to school with me and at recess stole away from the other children to look at it. I had it with me in my room when I went to bed and studied it till I knew every flower, every vine, every cupid. It was the last thing I thought of before going to sleep and the first after awaking in the morning.

Where was I? I remember—I was abusing my future mother-in-law for being so stupid as to refuse me her daughter's hand. The next morning I had received the valentine, for Effie was nineteen and I was twenty. Effie was as stupid, I thought, as her mother about the matter, for although she declared she would never marry any one but me, she demurred at becoming my wife, I being in possession of an income of nothing a year. At any rate, she told me that, her mother having forbidden her from receiving or communicating with me, she would obey. Indeed, she was being so stupid as to refuse me her daughter's hand.
